Some d'aappointment is expressed by thoughtless persons ! at the non-appearance of any signs of the initation which the issue of paper money was expected to cause; the fact being, of course, that there has been no such issue as yet, the first of the ninety million of legal tender potes being only promised for Friday next. There was nothing done in exchange to-day. Gold continues to be sold short very largely by speculators, and the talk among this class of persons is that it will fall to par before long. If it does, all the experience of the past must be thrown aside as useless. When the Bank of England was under suspension during the last Napoleonic war, geld rose at one time to a premium of 30 per cent. The following table, taken from the report of a Parliamentary committee, shows how permanent the depreciation of paper and the premium

The currency of England at this time was Bank of England notes, which were based upon deposits of bullion, mercantile paper and government se. taxation was something like $350,000,000. We do not institute any comparisons with the periods of the French assignats or of our own Continental money, because in both these cases the sager is med by government lacked the essential electrat of value-no provision had been made for its redemption. But if in England where an enormous revenue was raised by taxation, and there was no good ground for fearing the ultimate collapse of the paper currency, gold rose, under the Bank suspension, to 10, to 30 per cent premium, on what grounds can it be expected that we can make paper a legal tender in this country, and float a hundred and fifty millions of it, without causing some appreciation of the price of the precious metal?

A good deal of surprise has been created in com mercial circles in this city, Boston, Philadelphia and the West, by the proposal in Congress to tax all whiskey now in store, as well as that to be hereafter distilled. The tax on cotton, tobacco and other manufactures is only to be levied upon what may be produced after the isseef May. It is not easy to perceive why whiskes should be an exdifficulties in the way of levying a tax upon whiskey now in store will compel the abandonment of the scheme. It would be utterly impossible, even with an army of taxgatherers, to discover all the whiskey in store; and, while the fair trader would be gravely inconvenienced by being obliged to wait for the visit of the assessor, the rogue would inevitably evade the tax altogether. By levying the tax exclusively on whiskey distilled after th lst of May, a grave source of annoyance, experevenue will not be appreciably diminished. The business of the Sub-Treasury was as follows to-day:-

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Wednesday, March 26—6 P. M.

The money market is without change. Call loans range from 6 to 7 per cent. A few very choice names sell at the note brokers at 5 per cent; prime to good mercantile names from 6 to 7. Treasury notes are active. The 7.30 notes sell at 99% a par; the legal tender notes are becoming scarce. The West has absorbed all it could get of them, and does not return them. Our banks, and those of New England and Pennsylvania, will be compelled to expand their circulation to supply the wants of their customers.

The stock market continues inactive, in consequence of the want of hews, and the bears aveil themselves of the situation to put out short contracts.
